

The Middle Classes and Politics in Contemporary France: a Bibliographic Introduction

Nonna Mayer

► To cite this version:

Nonna Mayer. The Middle Classes and Politics in Contemporary France: a Bibliographic Introduction. European Journal of Political Research, 1982, 10 (4), pp.437 - 444. 10.1111/j.1475-6765.1982.tb00035.x . hal-03458082

HAL Id: hal-03458082

<https://sciencespo.hal.science/hal-03458082>

Submitted on 30 Nov 2021

HAL is a multi-disciplinary open access archive for the deposit and dissemination of scientific research documents, whether they are published or not. The documents may come from teaching and research institutions in France or abroad, or from public or private research centers.

L'archive ouverte pluridisciplinaire HAL, est destinée au dépôt et à la diffusion de documents scientifiques de niveau recherche, publiés ou non, émanant des établissements d'enseignement et de recherche français ou étrangers, des laboratoires publics ou privés.

The Middle Classes and Politics in Contemporary France: A Bibliographic Introduction*

NONNA MAYER

Centre d'Etude de la Vie Politique Française Contemporaine, Paris, France

The ‘middle classes’ are at the centre of today’s political debates. Jean Royer’s candidacy in the 1974 presidential election was aimed at them, ‘the heart of France’ (cf. Bellaïche et al., 1975). Valéry Giscard d’Estaing appealed to them at the beginning of his term of office, praising in Démocratie Française ‘the great central group’ destined to lead France towards ‘the advanced liberal democratic society’ (69). Just before the 1978 legislative elections, several middle-class movements sprang up, sponsored by Giscardians and Gaullists hoping to prevent a Left victory.¹ At the same time the Communist Party was trying to align, if not senior business managers, then at least the ‘intermediate salaried strata’ alongside the working class in the Union du Peuple de France (77, 71), while the Socialist Party was urging them to join its Front de classe (57, 76). Among the innumerable books and articles that have been written about the middle classes in France, we have selected only a few major works in order to review the political choices of the social categories that supposedly belong to these classes.

These categories vary somewhat according to the time period under review, as well as from author to author. The notion of an intermediary class between the rich and the poor, between the powerful and the oppressed, is not new, as witnessed by the often quoted passage from Aristotle (1962, I, 301): ‘In all States without exception, there exist three classes of citizens: one consists of the very rich, another of the very poor, and the third is in between the other two.’ In post-revolutionary France, under the pen of someone like Guizot or Tocqueville, the term ‘middle’ class meant the bourgeoisie, an intermediary class between the aristocracy and the common people. As an industrial proletariat developed and the bourgeoisie came to power, ‘the term used in the plural (the middle classes) came to designate the group which was under the bourgeoisie, but above the common people’ (Baudelot et al., 1974, 29). Before

* This is a revised and abridged version of a bibliography prepared for a Round Table of the Association Française de Science Politique which brought together historians, sociologists and political scientists to discuss the theme, ‘The Middle Classes and Politics: Stakes, Strategies, and Mobilization’, Paris, November 1980. The proceedings of this Round Table have been published as L'univers politique des classes moyennes. Paris, Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques, 1982. The numbers in parentheses refer to the numbered bibliography at the end of the article.

the Second World War, authors as different as François Simiand, Maurice Halbwachs, and Henri Mougin (2) agreed that small shopkeepers and artisans, employees, 'average' civil servants, and certain professional groups should be grouped in this category (Aron, 1939, 99). In spite of their differences, these varied social strata have in common work which is essentially non-manual and a certain economic independence, either because of a small patrimony (craftsmen, shopkeepers) or because of their job stability and security (upper-level employees, civil servants). In addition, they have acquired some higher level of education and share the same hopes: to escape from the working-class condition and to climb the social ladder through work, will, temperance and thrift – the same virtues which were described some twenty years apart by two Catholic theorists of the middle classes, André Desqueyrat (10) and Gaston Lecordier (101). For these two writers the working-class man who has these virtues already belongs to the middle classes.

Recent works on social classes in France, of a Marxist persuasion, prefer the term 'small bourgeoisie'. Nicos Poulantzas (19) defines this group by the fact that it does not belong to either of the two conflicting classes in the capitalist production system; the authors of 'The petty bourgeoisie in France' (3) by its economic base, a transfer of surplus value (rétrocession de plus-value); and Pierre Bourdieu (4, 5) by its pattern of social mobility, that of a 'transitional' class between the proletariat, its 'past', and the bourgeoisie, its 'future'. But no matter what their differences, all these authors underline the division within this group between a petty salaried bourgeoisie, or 'new small bourgeoisie' (19, 5), rapidly increasing since the Second World War (cf. Thevenot, 1977), and a petty independently employed bourgeoisie (craftsmen and shopkeepers) which is decreasing in numbers. Previously, the prototype of the middle classes was the small-business owner; today it is the 'executive' (cadre). Luc Boltanski has analysed the origin of this concept and its political implications (27). Up until 1946 it does not appear in official statistics, literature or law. The category as such emerged in the 1930s in connection with the middle-class movements of the period and the ideology of the 'third road' between capitalism and collectivism: the latter sprang mainly from two sources, social Catholicism and corporatism. The small-business owners and upper-level employees, united in the same middle class, and the nation's 'healthy' element, were to have the role of arbitrating between the mass of workers on the one side, and on the other the 'plutocratic oligarchy', essentially 'stateless' (apatrie) and composed of 'aliens' (métèque). The experience of the Popular Front speeded the movement along, with these groups feeling that they bore the cost of the alliance between big business and the working class. Organizations for the defence of the middle classes and trade unions for engineers and executives were established at the same time, based on the working-class model, but opposed to it. It was then that the word cadre was created to designate engineers and upper-level employees. It was to be sanctioned by the Vichy Government. After the war the word can be seen in official statistics, and the 'rise' of the executives became the main element of the debate about the middle classes. Dressed in the colours of modernity and technology, these 'new middle classes' were to carry with them the hopes of the future, in contrast to the traditional middle classes, the small businessmen, condemned to disappear by the evolution of capitalism. Pierre Bleton's book, Les Hommes des Temps Qui Viennent (26), marks this change. From the Right to the Left a whole new series of concepts arose to redefine the executives: new ruling class (37), technostucture (42), new intellectuals (29), new working class (24, 48, 54, 55). Luc Boltanski's article, 'Les systèmes de représentations d'un groupe social: les cadres' (28), and the introduction to the volume by Gérard Grunberg and René Mouriaux, Univers Politique des Cadres (86) provide a good review of this literature, which is much too abundant to be discussed here.

The cleavage between independent and salaried middle classes is not only demographic, but also political, and it emerged as early as the Third Republic. Historians of the Radical Party (Berstein, 1980; Nordman, 1974) confirm the fact that the party took root in the middle classes. Small-business owners, employees and civil servants shared an ideal made up of an attachment to the Republic, to secular values, and to small ownership as a way of liberating the working class. However, as shown in the studies on small enterprises done under the guidance of Philippe Vigier (especially those by Jeanne Gaillard and Philippe Nord), as early as 1890–1900 part of the independently employed began to lean towards the Right (Boulangist, and later Nationalist). The birth of an organized proletariat, the rise of the co-operative movement, and the spread of a Marxist Socialism loosened the links between small shopkeepers and their working-class clientele. And the first welfare laws turned them against their own employees and against state intervention, which under the impulse of the Radicals themselves was becoming stronger (cf. Vigier and Haupt, 1981, especially Nord, 1981; Reberioux, 1981; also Gaillard, 1982). The salaried middle classes, especially those in the public sector – teachers and civil servants – evolved in the opposite direction, joining the Socialist Party (SFIO) and trade union federation (CGT), where they formed one of the strongest elements. This occurred to such an extent that in the 1930s the majority of authors agreed that they no longer belonged to the 'middle classes', since they had the 'wrong frame of mind' (10). This shift is obvious in Antoine Prost's (1977) analysis of veterans' movements. Shopkeepers, professional people and upper-level employees can be found together in the Union Nationale des Combattants, which was close to the Ligues, most notably the Croix de Feu, while teachers and lower-level civil servants joined the Union Fédérale. The crisis of 1929 made obvious the divergent interests of the different elements of the middle classes. The income and purchasing power of the independently employed middle classes suffered the most severely (Sauvy, 1967, II). The Popular Front, the wave of occupation of factories, increases in salaries and in the social insurance contributions which accompanied them, all made their dissatisfaction grow and caused their final break with the Left (Dupeux, 1959).

During the Fourth Republic the development of public opinion polls allows us to define more precisely the percentage of the middle classes within the electorates of the different parties. The best source is still the work done under the direction of Maurice Duverger (85). George Lavau's contribution emphasizes the absence of specific political representation of the middle classes and the scattering of their votes among the various parties. However, the salaried middle classes voted more often for the Socialists (SFIO) and Christian Democrats (MRP), while the independently employed middle classes voted more for the Radicals and the Right. In the mid-1950s Poujadism symbolized a right-wing extremist revolt of the independently employed middle classes: Stanley Hoffman (99) and Seymour M. Lipset (103) have analysed its causes, and Dominique Borne (94) its 'deterioration'. Subsequently, the 'Gaullist phenomenon' studied by Jean Charlot (83) united the majority of the middle classes under one banner.

The outline of a new evolution can be seen since the May 1968 crisis, President de Gaulle's resignation in 1969, and the rebirth of the Socialist Party (Epinay convention of 1971) followed by the signature of the Left's Programme Commun in 1972. Two important surveys carried out ten years apart give some measure of this evolution. The first, by Guy Michelat and Michel Simon (90), is a collation of the surveys done by IFOP around the time of the 1967 legislative elections. The second is a survey conducted just after the 1978 legislative elections by a team of researchers at the Centre d'Etude de la Vie Politique Française Contemporaine (87). The latter confirms the ties of the petty independently employed to the Right – two-thirds of them voted for the Right in 1978 as in 1967 – and of civil servants and teachers to the Left. It also reveals the sharp turn to the Left that has been taken by the cadres, especially the younger generations, within the ten-year period. As demonstrated by Gérard Grunberg and Etienne Schweisguth, the Left has progressed by 22 points within the strata of the salaried middle classes under 40 years of age. Within the Left it is the Socialist Party which has benefited the most from their votes, and François Mitterand owes his victory in the 1981 presidential election to them (88). This phenomenon is connected to the young age of these categories, their particularly high level of education, and their ideological evolution, as well as to a decrease in religious practice and an inclination towards hedonist and anti-authority values of 'cultural liberalism' (87). On the other hand, small-business owners show a marked moral strictness which is often repressive, praising work, savings and authority (4, 5).

Even the modes of action of the independently employed middle classes differ from those of the salaried middle classes. At the call of Pierre Poujade yesterday and Gérard Nicoud today, small-business owners willingly give in to the temptation of direct, if not violent, action (107, 106, 108). They represent a mobilization potential against the state which cannot be ignored, and an efficient pressure group, as Suzanne Berger has shown in one of the rare articles (92) devoted to the organization of the traditional middle classes. At the same time, a growing proportion of employees and executives within large industrial plants and the civil service serve an apprenticeship in union activities and strikes (111, 112, 114). Within these same categories, new means of political intervention have developed on subjects such as the status of women, ecology, or local power. These 'new' social movements have been analysed in detail by Alain Touraine and the Centre d'Etude des Mouvements Sociaux.² Their problematic ties together the decline of the historical role played by the working class and the appearance of 'new social actors' external to traditional political forces. These new actors belong principally to the new petty 'bourgeoisie'. Several of these – the associative movement, the ecology movement, urban struggles – have been studied in detail (82, 91).

The question remains whether the trend of the 'new' middle classes towards the Left will persist. The economic policy of the Socialists since their arrival in power in 1981 directly affects the cadres. It is not out of the question that some of them will change sides and that once again organizations and movements of the 'middle classes' will flourish, calling for the old and new petty bourgeoisie to forget their differences and unite in order to eject the Left from power.

NOTES

1 Alongside the rebirth of the Comité National de Liaison et d'Action des Classes Moyennes (1947), we can add Jean Henninot's Syndicat National des Classes Moyennes (1975), Jean-Pierre Prouteau's

Centre National de Coopération Interprofessionnelle (1976), and the formation in 1977 of the Groupes Initiative et Responsabilité, bringing together Michel Debatisse (Fédération Nationale des Syndicats d'Exploitants Agricoles), Léon Gingembre (Confédération Générale des Petites et Moyennes Entreprises), Jacques Monier (Confédération Syndicale des Médecins Français), Francis Combe (Association Permanente des Chambres de Métiers), and Ivan Charpentier (Confédération Générale des Cadres).

- 2 For a synthesis of the research done on this subject, see Boy and Mayer 1980, especially sections 2.3, 3.1, 3.2 and 3.3, which are devoted to the renewal of associational life and social movements. These sections review the principal articles and reference works which could not be mentioned here because of lack of space.

REFERENCES

- Aristote (1962). La Politique. Paris: Vrin.
- Aron, R., Halbwachs, M., Vermeil, E. and Franck, M. R. (1939). Inventaire III, classes moyennes. Paris: Alcan.
- Baudelot, C., Establet, R. and Malemort, S. (1974) La petite bourgeoisie en France. Paris: Maspero.
- Bellaïche, M., Cot, A and Massard-Paquot, C. (1975). L'idéologie petite bourgeoisie. Etude d'une pratique signifiante: le discours de la campagne présidentielle de Jean Royer en 1974. Paris: Paris I, Sorbonne. Mémoire pour le DES de Science Politique.
- Berstein, S. (1980). Histoire du parti radical. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques. 2 vols.
- Boy, D. and Mayer, N. (1980). 'Les conséquences politiques du changement social', pp. 164–76, in La recherche en sciences humaines- sciences sociales, 1979–80. Paris: CNRS.
- Dupeux, G. (1959). Le Front Populaire et les élections de 1936. Paris: Colin.
- Gaillard, J. (1982). 'Le rôle des classes moyennes traditionnelles (atelier-boutique) entre la droite et la gauche de 1880 au début du XXe siècle', in L'univers politique des classes moyennes. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques.
- Nord, P. (1981). 'Le mouvement des petits commerçants et la politique en France de 1888 à 1914', pp. 35–56 in Vigier and Haupt, 1981.
- Nordman, J. (1974). Histoire des radicaux. Paris: la Table Ronde.
- Prost, A. (1977). Les anciens combattants et la société française. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques. 3 vols.
- Reberioux, M. (1981). 'Les socialistes français et le petit commerce au tournant du siècle', pp. 57–70 in Vigier and Haupt, 1981.
- Sauvy, A. (1967). Histoire économique de la France entre les deux guerres. Paris.
- Thevenot, L. (1977). 'Les catégories sociales en 1975: l'extension du salariat', Economie et statistiques 91, 3–31.
- Vigier, P. and Haupt, H. G. (eds.), (1981). Petite Entreprise et Politique, special issue of Le Mouvement Social, 114 (January–March).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The following bibliography reflects the state of the debate about the middle classes in France since 1945. During this period most attention has been paid to the salaried middle classes, and especially the 'executives'. Therefore, the fact that the majority of works listed here are about these categories should not be surprising.

1. THE DEBATE ON THE MIDDLE CLASSES

1.1 Middle Classes, Middle Social Strata, Petty Bourgeoisie

- 1 Arno, J. (1973). 'The Lower Middle Class as a Historical Problem', Journal of Modern History 47, 409–36.
- 2 Aron, R., Halbwachs, M., Vermeil, E. and Franck, M. R. (1939). Inventaire III, classes moyennes. Paris: Alcan.

- 3 Baudelot, C., Establet, R. and Malemort, J. (1974). La petite bourgeoisie en France. Paris: Maspero.
- 4 Bourdieu, P. (1966). 'Condition de classe et position de classe'. Archives européennes de sociologie 7, 201–29.
- 5 Bourdieu, P. (1979). La distinction. Paris: Editions de Minuit.
- 6 Bouvier, A. and Mury, G. (1963). Les classes sociales en France. Paris: Editions Sociales.
- 7 Chaulier, J., Chaulier, R. and Mer, R. (1974). 'L'économie. La France concrète. Les classes moyennes et vous', l'Economie 1206 (16 December), Supplement No. 3.
- 8 De Chilly, L. (1924). La classe moyenne en France après la guerre (1919–24). Bourges: A. Tardy.
- 9 Deherme, G. (1912). Les classes moyennes. Essai sur le parasitisme social. Paris: Perrin.
- 10 Desqueyrat, A. (1939). Classes moyennes françaises. Crise, programme, organisations. Paris: Editions Spes.
- 11 Etudes et documents du Centre de Recherches économiques et sociales (1954) 8 (November), 1–77.
- 12 Halbwachs, M. (1972). Classes sociales et morphologie. Paris: Editions de Minuit.
- 13 Izard, G. (1938). Les classes moyennes. Paris: Editions Rieder.
- 14 Lacroix, B. and Dobry, M. (1977). 'À la recherche d'un cadre théorique pour l'analyse politique des classes moyennes', Annales de la Faculté de Droit et de Science Politique de l'Université de Clermont I, 14, 379–409.
- 15 Lhomme, J. J. (1938). Le problème des classes. Paris: Sirey.
- 16 Marxisme et petite bourgeoisie (1969). Paris: Maspero.
- 17 Millot, R. (1969). Les classes moyennes dans la civilisation du XXème siècle. Paris: CESPC.
- 18 Oualid, W. (1938). 'Les classes moyennes', in Mélanges dédiés à M. le Professeur Henry Truchy. Paris: Librairie du Recueil Sirey.
- 19 Poulantzas, N. (1974). Les classes sociales dans le capitalisme aujourd'hui. Paris: Editions du Seuil.
- 20 Touraine, A. 'Classes Moyennes', in Encyclopédia Universalis 11, 414–17.
- 21 Weiller, J. (1934). 'Les appels aux classes moyennes et la décomposition de la lutte des classes', Annales du droit et des sciences sociales 2–3, 353–92.

1.2 The Cadres: New Ruling Class or New Working Class

- 22 Adam, G. (1972). 'Introduction à un débat sur la nouvelle classe ouvrière', Revue française de science politique 22, 509–28.
- 23 Bell, D. (1976). Vers la société post-industrielle. Paris: Laffont.
- 24 Belleville, P. (1963). Une nouvelle classe ouvrière. Paris: Editions Julliard.
- 25 Bidet, J. (1974). 'Les nouveaux petits bourgeois', La Nouvelle Critique 77 (October), 32–40.
- 26 Bleton, P. (1956). Les hommes des temps qui viennent. Essai sur les classes moyennes. Paris: Les Éditions Ouvrières.
- 27 Boltanski, L. (1979). 'Taxinomies sociales et luttes de classes. La mobilisation de la "classe moyenne" et l'invention des "cadres"', Actes de la recherche en sciences sociales 29, 75–105.
- 28 Boltanski, L. (1979). 'Les systèmes de représentations d'un groupe social: les cadres', Revue française de sociologie 20, 631–67.
- 29 Bon, F. and Burnier, M. A. (1966). Les nouveaux intellectuels. Paris: Editions Cujas.
- 30 Bon, F. and Burnier, M. A. (1971). Classe ouvrière et révolution. Paris: Le Seuil.
- 31 Bouvier, M. (1967). 'Le technicien . . . de qui s'agit-il?', Chronique sociale de France 5–6 (31 October), 87–91.
- 32 Casanova, A., Prevost, C. and Metzger, J. (1970). Les intellectuels et les luttes de classes. Paris: Editions Sociales.
- 33 Chazalette, A. (1967). 'Les cadres: classe moyenne ou aspect nouveau de la classe ouvrière', Chronique sociale de France 5–6 (31 October), 93–100.
- 34 Cheverny, J. (1967). Les cadres. Essai sur de nouveaux prolétaires. Paris: Julliard.
- 35 CFDT (1980). Le tertiaire éclaté. Paris: Seuil.
- 36 Chronique sociale de France (1965). 'Les nouvelles classes moyennes', 5–6 (October).
- 37 Dahrendorf, R. (1972). Classes et conflits de classe dans la société industrielle. Paris: Mouton.
- 38 Delille, R. (1956). 'Les nouvelles classes moyennes', Economie et Politique 3 (November), 152–67.
- 39 Dubois, J. (1971). Les cadres, nouveau Tiers Etat. Paris: Bordas.
- 40 Dubois, J. (1971). 'Les cadres au service de la technocratie', Projet 57 (July/August), 769–82.
- 41 Dumenil, G. (1975). La position de classe des cadres et employés: la fonction capitaliste parcellaire. Grenoble: Presses universitaires de Grenoble.
- 42 Galbraith, J. K. (1967). Le nouvel Etat industriel. Essai sur le système économique américain. Paris: Gallimard.
- 43 Garaudy, R. (1969). Le grand tournant du socialisme. Paris: Gallimard.

- 44 Gueda, P. (1973). 'A propos des soi-disant nouvelles "couches moyennes"', Critique de l'Economie Politique 11–12 (August/September), 192–206.
- 45 Larere, P. (1970). Une nouvelle classe moyenne. L'avènement des techniciens. Paris: Editions économie et humanisme/Editions Ouvrières.
- 46 Lipset, S. M. (1964). 'The Changing Class Structure and Contemporary European Politics', Daedalus, Winter, 271–303.
- 47 Malkin, D. (1972). La tertiarisation de la société. Paris: Sésame.
- 48 Mallet, S. (1963). La nouvelle classe ouvrière. Paris: Editions du Seuil.
- 49 Mills, C. (1970). Les cols blancs. Paris: Le Seuil.
- 50 Montlibert, C. de (1977). 'L'éducation permanente et la promotion des classes moyennes', Sociologie du Travail 19, 243–65.
- 51 Praderie, M. (1968). Ni ouvrier, ni paysan: les tertiaires. Paris: Le Seuil.
- 52 Reynaud, J. D. (1972). 'La nouvelle classe ouvrière, la technologie et l'histoire', Revue française de science politique 22, 529–42.
- 53 Ross, G. (1978). 'Marxism and the New Middle Classes: French Critiques', Theory and Society 5, 163–90.
- 54 Touraine, A. (1968). Le mouvement de Mai ou le communisme utopique. Paris: Le Seuil.
- 55 Touraine, A. (1969). La société post-industrielle. Paris: Denoël.

2. MIDDLE CLASSES AND POLITICAL PARTIES

- 56 Alfand, C. and Vincent, C. (1975). 'Où vont les classes moyennes?' Nouvelle Critique 5 (January/February), 1958–68, 1983–95.
- 57 Bacot, P. (1978). 'Le front de classe', Revue française de science politique 28, 277–98.
- 58 Bouet, R. (1963). 'Techniciens et ingénieurs', Cahiers du Communisme 39, 37–50.
- 59 Chatain, J. and Gaudon, G. (1975). Petites et moyennes entreprises: l'heure du choix. Paris: Editions Sociales.
- 60 Chatain, J. (1974). 'Les couches moyennes: vers le rassemblement des forces anti-monopolistiques', Economie et Politique 241–2, 39–52.
- 61 'Classes moyennes et grand capital' (1963). Cahiers du Communisme 39, 12–86.
- 62 'Classe ouvrière et classe moyenne' (1960). Cahiers du Communisme 36, 1075–88.
- 63 Comité des cadres pour la liberté (1978). Crépuscule des cadres? Paris: Comité des cadres pour la liberté.
- 64 Crescenzo, B. de and Giard, J. (1977). Les cadres aussi . . . Paris: Editions Sociales.
- 65 Des Garets, B. (1970). Les cadres dans la société d'aujourd'hui et de demain. Paris: UDR.
- 66 Dubois, J. (1971). Les cadres, enjeu politique. Paris: Editions du Seuil.
- 67 Duclos, J. (1948). 'Les Communistes et les classes moyennes des villes et campagnes', Cahiers du Communisme, March, 235–43.
- 68 Fajon, E. (1972). Le parti communiste français et les problèmes des artisans et commerçants. Paris: PCF.
- 69 Giscard d'Estaing, V. (1976). Démocratie Française. Paris: Fayard.
- 70 Glucksmann, A. (1974). 'Nous ne sommes pas tous prolétaires', Les Temps Modernes 29, 1299–374.
- 71 Lavau, G. (1981). A quoi sert le PCF? Paris: Fayard.
- 72 Metzger, J. (1969). 'Réflexions sur l'action du parti parmi les ingénieurs cadres et techniciens', Cahiers du Communisme 45 (January), 35–48.
- 73 Metzger, J. (1970). 'Quelques aspects de la lutte idéologique chez les ITC', Cahiers du Communisme 46 (June), 38–48.
- 74 Neron, P. (1962). 'Situation et luttes des artisans et petits commerçants', Nouvelle Revue Internationale 5 (July), 160–7.
- 75 Parti Communiste Français (1973). Ingénieurs, techniciens, cadres, agents de maîtrise: le Parti Communiste Français s'adresse à vous. Paris: PCF.
- 76 Portelli, H. (1980). Le socialisme français tel qu'il est. Paris: PUF.
- 77 Quin, C. (1976). Classes sociales et Union du peuple de France. Paris: Editions Sociales.
- 78 Raymons, J. and Lelu, A. (1968). 'Pour un centre politique en milieu cadre et technicien', Hermès 1 (March–May).
- 79 Socialisme et Entreprise (1974) Les cadres et le socialisme. Paris: Socialisme et Entreprise.
- 80 Ysmal, C. (1976). 'La gauche française et les classes sociales', Projet 106, 649–58.
- 81 Simon, M. (1977). 'Front de classe ou Union du peuple de France', Cahiers du Communisme, October 28–41.

3. MOBILIZATION OF THE MIDDLE CLASSES

3.1 Voting

- 82 Boy, D. (1981). 'Le vote écologiste en 1978'. Revue française de science politique 31, 394–416.
- 83 Charlot, J. (1970). Le phénomène gaulliste. Paris: Fayard.
- 84 Charlot, J. and IFOP (1973). Quand la gauche peut gagner. Les élections législatives des 4–11 mars 1973. Paris: A. Moreau.
- 85 Duverger, M. et al. (1955). Partis politiques et classes sociales. Paris: Colin.
- 86 Grunberg, G. and Mouriaux, R. (1979). L'univers politique et syndical des cadres. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques.
- 87 Grunberg, G., Capdevielle, J., Dupoirier, E., Schweisguth, E. and Ysmal, C. (1981). France de gauche, vote de droite. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques.
- 88 Julliard, J. (1981). 'Comment la France a basculé'. Le Nouvel Observateur, 1 June, 53–9.
- 89 Mayer, N. and Michelat, G. (1981). 'Les choix électoraux des petits commerçants et artisans en 1967. L'importance es variables contextuelles'. Revue française de sociologie, 2, 503–21.
- 90 Michelat, G. and Simon, M. (1977). Classe, religion et comportement politique. Paris: Presses de la Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques/Editions Sociales.
- 91 Parodi, J. L. (1979). 'Essai de problématique sur le vote écologiste: les écologistes et la tentation politique', Revue politique et parlementaire 87, 25–43.

3.2 Organization of the Traditional Middle Classes

- 92 Berger, S. (1977). 'Changes in the Organization of the Traditional Middle Classes from the Fourth to Fifth Republics'. Comparative Politics 10, 121–36.
- 93 Bonnet, A. (1973). 'Un nouveau groupe de pression: le CID-UNATI'. Revue politique et parlementaire 75, 44–61.
- 94 Borne, D. (1977). Petits bourgeois en révolte? Le mouvement Poujade. Paris: Flammarion.
- 95 Bunel, J. and Saglio, J. (1979). L'action patronale du CNPF au petit patron. Paris: PUF.
- 96 Cluzel, J. (1975). Les boutiques en colère. Paris: Plon.
- 97 Ehrmann, H. W. (1959). La politique du patronat français, 1936–55. Paris: Colin.
- 98 Guy, C. (1955). Le cas Poujade. Paris: A. Martel.
- 99 Hoffmann, S. (1956). Le mouvement Poujade. Paris: Colin.
- 100 Lavau, G. (1955). 'Note sur un "pressure group" français. La Confédération Générale des Petites et Moyennes Entreprises', Revue française de science politique 5, 370–83.
- 101 Lecordier, G. (1950). Les classes moyennes en marche. Paris: Bloud & Gay.
- 102 Lefranc, G. (1976). Les organisations patronales en France du passé au présent. Paris: Payot.
- 103 Lipset, S. M. (1963). L'homme et la politique. Paris: Editions du Seuil.
- 104 Meynaud, J. (1958). Les groupes de pression en France. Paris: Colin.
- 105 Millot, R. (1967). 'L'organisation des classes moyennes', Chronique Sociale de France 5–6 (October), 79–86.
- 106 Nicoud, G. (1972). Les dernières libertés. menottes aux mains. Paris: Denoël.
- 107 Poujade, P. (1955). J'ai choisi le combat. Saint-Créé: Société Générale des Editions et Publications.
- 108 Roy, M. (1971). Les commerçants. Entre la révolte et la modernisation. Paris: Editions du Seuil.

3.3 Salaried Middle Classes and Union Activities

- 109 Andrieux, A. and Lignon, J. (1973). Le militant syndicaliste d'aujourd'hui. Paris: Denoël-Gauthier.
- 110 Bachy, J. P. (1971). Les cadres en France. Paris: Colin.
- 111 Benguigui, G., Gasdos, C. and Willemer, A. (1969). Les cadres en mouvement. Paris: Editions de l'Epi.
- 112 Sociologie du Travail (1968). 'Les cadres dans l'entreprise et dans le mouvement syndical', 10, 241–324.
- 113 Lefranc, G. (1968). Le mouvement syndical. II. De la Libération aux événements de mai-juin 1968. Paris: Payot.
- 114 Malterre, A. (1972). La Confédération Générale des Cadres. La révolte des mal-aimés. Paris: Editions de l'Epi.
- 115 Maurice, M., Monteil, L., Guillon, R and Gaulon, J. (1967). Les cadres et l'entreprise. Paris: ISST. Mimeo.
- 116 Meunier, P. (1970). 'Le syndicalisme des cadres en France', Droit Social 11, 506–16.
- 117 Nasse, G. (1970). Essai sur le syndicalisme des cadres. Paris: Union des cadres et techniciens.
- 118 Reynaud, J. D. (1975). Les syndicats en France. Paris: Editions du Seuil.